REDS CONTROL PERSIAN AREA

Bolshevik Fleet Attacks Seaport, Drive Back British and Russ

MOSCOW, May 22.--(By the Associated Press.)--The capture of Enzeli in Persia on the Caspian sea by the commander of the Russian soviet fleet which will have the effect of uniting revolutionary elements of eastern and western Persia, has eliminated counter-revolutionary forces on the Caspian. The offensive was undertaken by the soviet commander on his own initiative, the measure was considered necessary, according to a report from the soviet commander, to crush remnants of the forces of the former anti-bolshevik leader, Gen. Denikine, which were co-operating with the troops commanded by the British general.

The bombardment of Enzeli followed a request by the British for a parley and the Russian ultimatum demanding evacuation. The British commander requested permission to withdraw to Resht, 16 miles southeast, before the time limit fixed by the Russian commander had expired. Permission was granted for the withdrawal of the Sepoy and Moslem troops and of the Russian forces held as prisoners of war.

On the receipt of this information today at the office of M. Tchitcherine, foreign minister, sent a note to the Persian government, explaining that the action taken by the soviet commander at Enzeli was without instructions from the home government but that it was regarded as necessary for the protection of the Caspian region against attacks of counter-revolutionaries and essential to a resumption of normal relations between Persia and Russia as outlined in an exchange of notes.

The attitude of Persia and the establishment of new Russian consulates in Afghanistan, Bokhara and western China and the announcement of the establishment of a democratic government favorable to Russia at Khiva, Russian Turkistan, are among indications considered here as pointing to a new political alignment in central Asia looking toward Russia rather than to western Europe for support.

EXPLAINS HIGH INTEREST RATES

Gov. Harding of Reserve Board Defends Policy of Cutting Down Credits

WASHINGTON, May 25.--Governor Harding of the federal reserve board declared in a letter to Senator Owen of Oklahoma that no remedy had been devised for the high call money rates prevailing in New York.

Replying to criticisms of the board's action made by Senator Owen, he said that should the New York reserve bank decline to loan to banks on government bonds, who, in turn, loan to their customers on stock exchange collateral, as suggested by Mr. Owen, the result would be higher money rates.

"It is interesting to note, however," he wrote, "that the high rates of which you complain reached their peak in November, 1919, before the rediscount rates of the reserve banks were raised, and that since the rates were advanced on January 23, call money rates, with the exception of one or two temporary flurries, have ruled quite steadily around their present level."

Mr. Harding said he resented the "information that the federal reserve banks are putting themselves in the attitude of profiteering."

"I cannot escape the conclusion," Mr. Harding wrote, "that were the federal reserve banks to establish the low stable rates proposed by you, they would soon reach the limit of their available resources, beyond which point, you state, the expansion of credit 'even for the most important purposes is not justified.' It seems to me that the adoption of the policy proposed by you would result in a wild scramble with an enforced denial of credit after the first few days."

HAMPTON TRIAL SET FOR JULY 13

Bookkeeper Pleads Not Guilty to Forgery and Embezzlement Charges

Trial of Walter M. Hampton, charged with having filled in two company checks of the Golden Rule store on May 12, will open in the district court before Judge A. E. Pratt, July 13. Hampton, when brought into court yesterday afternoon, entered a plea of not guilty after a complaint charging him with forgery and embezzlement had been read.

Hampton, through his counsel, asked that as much time as possible be given before the trial in order that his defense may be prepared. It was stated by his counsel that an endeavor was being made to secure copies of certain letters, which are now held by various banks in Idaho, Wyoming and Colorado. No intimation of the particular line of defense to be used by the former bookkeeper was given.

Hampton appeared surprised when the complaint was read charging him with forgery and embezzlement. He had intimated before a group of officers and newspaper men just before the hearing that he believed the charge against him would be reduced to a misdemeanor. Following his plea Hampton was returned to the county jail.

THE COURAGE OF MARGE O'DOONE AT ALHAMBRA

For Decoration Day the Alhambra theatre has secured the most expensive picture of the season, "The Courage of Marge O'Doone." This picture will be shown four days, beginning next Sunday. It carries a cast of exceptional merit, and the story is filled with excitement from the first word to the last.

James Oliver Curwood is an authority on matters pertaining to the Canadian Northwest. He spends a portion of each year in that country and has written several stories using that locale for the background. Many of them have been pictured as special productions and have created a furor wherever they have been shown. Perhaps the best of all the Curwood tales told that Senator King and Mr. Moyle will be among those elected from the state at large, and that the delegation will go to the national convention uninstructed.

RESERVE BANK POWER CAN CHECK A PANIC

CLEVELAND, May 25.--The millions of dollars held in reserve by the federal government is sufficient guarantee against any liability of panic, D. C. Wills, chairman of the fourth federal reserve board, declared in an address before the eighth annual convention of the Association of Reserve City Bankers. He declared the avoidance of panic to be one of the fundamental reasons for the creation of federal reserve banks.

White banks are being blamed for the low quotations on Liberty bonds. Mr. Wills said the real reason was because they are being utilized as mediums of exchange by their holders.

Mr. Wills appealed to all bankers to get into politics, "clean politics" declaring the influence wielded by bankers to be unappreciated by them and so untutilized.

NEITHER PARTY LIKELY TO HAVE A LIQUOR PLANK

Sentiment Against Attempt to Revive Booze Corpses

BY H. N. RICKEY.
N. E. A. Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, May 25.--There has been a rapidly increasing crystallization of sentiment during the past few weeks, among both Democratic and Republican leaders, against interjecting the liquor question into the coming campaign.

The situation at the moment offers little encouragement to the liquor interests or even the light wine and beer enthusiasts.

Months ago, in fact as far back as the adoption of national prohibition by constitutional amendment, an amplified propaganda was launched for the purpose of trying to commit either or both of the parties to a policy of exempting light wines and beer.

An attempt has been made to show that there is a marked and growing popular reaction against drastic enforcement particularly in respect to light wines and beer.

The alluring prospect of capitalizing this reaction in the form of "liberal" planks was presented to Democratic and Republican leaders.

G. O. P. Flatly Against It.
It must be said in all fairness that the suggestion fell on deaf ears so far as the Republicans are concerned.

Whatever the personal views of individual Republican leaders may be on the light wine and beer question, no serious consideration has been given by those who will write the platform to the idea of committing the party to the so-called liberal side of the liquor question.

If the Republicans mention liquor at all in their platform they are far more likely to take the extreme prohibition view calling for rigid enforcement, including light wines and liquors, than the liberal view.

More probable than either is that in the Republican platform the liquor question will be conspicuous by its absence, so far as direct reference to it is concerned.

A large number of Democratic leaders have given serious consideration to the political possibilities in going to the country on a light wine and beer platform.

About a month ago the enthusiasm for this idea reached its peak. If the platform had been written then there is some ground for the belief that a light wine and beer plank would have been in it.

But each day since then has made this less likely.

Bryan's Position.
The victory of Bryan in his contest for a seat in the convention as a delegate-at-large from Nebraska, greatly dampened the ardor of those who were urging that the party come out for light wine and beer.

It is generally understood that Bryan will be a member of the committee on resolutions and probably of the subcommittee which will draft the platform.

He will throw the whole weight of his powerful influence not only in the committee, but later on in the convention, if that is necessary, against a declaration of policy giving the slightest encouragement to any phase of the liquor traffic.

I am told by a close personal friend of Bryan who talked with him recently that the commoner feels more strongly on this subject than he has ever felt about anything since he has been in public life. He is much more interested in keeping the nation bone dry than he is in the success of the Democratic party.

He would like to force the party to take a positive position against any attempt to revise the prohibition law. But he will be willing to compromise on a silence program on the theory that when the states ratified the prohibition constitutional amendment, the liquor question was settled and is no longer an issue.

It is a pretty safe guess that the liquor question will occupy the same space in the Democratic platform adopted at San Francisco as it will occupy in the Republican platform adopted three weeks earlier in Chicago.

That will be exactly no space at all.
